Welcome to the Bergstrasse - a glorious spot on the "German Riviera"

Here, the spring sunshine warms your bones while people are still shivering elsewhere. Here, almond and fruit trees burst into bloom while in other parts, hoarfrost still numbs the earth. Here, summer lasts longer and autumn is more clement. The Bergstrasse is more than just a landscape, it is a life-affirming lifestyle. The castles, palaces and historic old towns strung out between the Jugendstil city of Darmstadt and world-famous Heidelberg bring history to life.

The Mediterranean climate ripens the grapes for exquisite wines and allows exotic plants to flourish. The region's parks, gardens and forests are the stuff of dreams. The range of sports and leisure activities, cultural events and culinary specialities on offer is top-notch. People here are pleased to share their region and happy to show it off. They are proud to be "Bergsträßer".

Worth seeing

Over 30 castles, palaces and monasteries stand out in splendour among the forests and vineyards, like stone gems embedded in the undulating landscape of green fields, lush forests and flourishing vines. Their silhouettes are like something out of a period film. The Carolingian aula regia (Latin for "king's hall") in Lorsch, which has been a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 1991, is the oldest structure of this era in Germany.

Mathildenhöhe in Darmstadt is considered the centre of Jugendstil, the German equivalent of Art Nouveau, while Heidelberg Castle poised above the Neckar is the quintessence of romance. Proud half-timbered town halls stand guard over cobblestoned marketplaces, with richly sculpted sandstone fountains pattering at their centre. In lovingly renovated old town districts such as Weinheim's Gerberbachviertel or Heppenheim's Laternenweg, little picture-book houses whisper of life in medieval times. Everywhere you go, experienced guides offer tours on subjects of interest.

Worth experiencing

Concerts, exhibitions and entire festivals are staged in all the historic places, adding a very special touch to your cultural experience. Darmstadt's and Heidelberg's theatres are internationally reputed. Creatives, comedians and musicians show off their skills here, there and everywhere between the castles and half-timbered houses. The parks, gardens and monuments become stages for world-class stars who are fascinated by this region, for example in the park of Weinheim Castle, the Kurmainzer Amtshof (tithe house of the Elector of Mainz) in Heppenheim or Heiligenberg Castle in Seeheim-Jugenheim. People on the Bergstrasse celebrate all the seasons.

When the fruit trees are decked in a myriad of pastel-hued blossoms, it's time for the Bergstrasse Weinfrühling (spring wine festival), with wine hikes among the vineyard sites and culinary highlights.

Walks, hikes and cycle tours

The Bergstrasse is an eldorado for holiday-makers looking for leisure and sports activities. You could call it one big open-air fitness studio ringed by castles and vineyards. There is a close-knit network of cycle tracks in the lowlands that links up the tourist attractions. Hikers can discover the castles and fortresses between Darmstadt and Heidelberg on the certified and challenging Burgensteig (Castle Trail). The Blütenweg (Blossom Trail) is recommended for hikers who prefer a more leisurely walk amid nature. Both trails offer magnificent views. The region is also crossed by three long-distance, certified hiking trails, the Alemannenweg, Nibelungensteig and Neckarsteig trails.

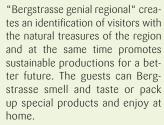

A separate cycling brochure is also available that describes a cycle track surrounded by nature between Darmstadt and Heidelberg, with lots of suggestions for mountain bike rides in the neighbouring Odenwald area. You can also explore the region at a more leisurely pace on e-bikes. Weinheim offers the first baths in southern Germany to be heated by geothermal energy, "Miramar", where bring water bubbles up from a depth of 1,000 metres.

Brilliantly regional

"Genial regional" - that's the name of a new brand Bergstrasse, with which the regional products, companies and ideas are awarded. On the Bergstrasse there is almost nothing that is not would be directly connected to the region: wine, Asparagus, natural and healthy foods from the pastures, forests and streams, creative products such as vinegar, chocolates, mustard or cosmetics made from natural ingredients. Various restaurants offer dishes with regional ingredients.

Wine events

Bergstrasse, home to fine wines

The Bergstrasse enjoys 1,600 hours of sunshine per year, which gives great wines plenty of chance to ripen. Bergstrasse wines are racy, with terroir-expressive Rieslings, or perfumed and characterful like the wines made from Pinot Gris (Grauburgunder) and Pinot Blanc (Weissburgunder). The vineyard sites of the Hessische Bergtraße are linked with those of the Badische Bergstrasse by 840 hectares of vines. Small family businesses and cooperatives tend their terroirs and make their wines based on a long tradition.

They produce wines for everyday drinking and special occasions as well as specialities including Trockenbeerenauslese (a highly concentrated wine made from individually picked botrytised grapes dried up almost to raisins) and even ice wines. Red Riesling, a historical white grape variety, is a real speciality (see www.land-des-roten-rieslings-en.de).

Wine lovers can get to know the whole range of wines at the wineries, restaurants, taverns and wine festivals. Those who like to walk can explore the Bergstrasse's vineyards with a bottle in their backpack, on the wine hike between Alsbach and Heppenheim, or on the "Wine and Stone" educational trail that winds its way between Heppenheim and Bensheim. The Badische Weinstraße that begins south of Heppenheim connects the region with other wine-growing regions in Baden.
